Written and illustrated by a high school student with epilepsy, Karen's Epilepsy is a 28-page story about a girl with complex-partial seizures. When Karen's family moves to a new city, she wonders if her new classmates will befriend her despite her differences. Karen struggles with her own self-acceptance until something unexpected happens. Written with elementary school students in mind, this heart-warming story speaks to both children and adults. With reassuring words and pictures Baltaro communicates a hopeful message of friendship, confidence, and determination.
