This book, titled “Spider House: Unraveling the Secrets of Sudanese Islamist Securities”, uncovers facts pertaining to how the Islamic Front has ruled Sudan for over a quarter of a century starting in 1989 where it took power through a military coup. The author sheds light on the horrendous actions that were taken behind closed doors through the government’s “security machine” sector. These actions include individual and group executions, especially those against university students in Darfur as well as political activists throughout the county. The author points strong fingers of blame towards those who committed these crimes. Among them is political leader and mastermind of the military coup, Hassan Al-Turabi, current president Omer Hassan Al-Basheer, his previous deputy Ali Osman Taha, along with numerous other governmental individuals. Written in the Arabic language, the book has penetrated the main organizational structure of the “security machine” sector through the publication of its most protected official documents. It is undoubtedly the most invasive encounter that has occurred in the history of this governmental organization since its establishment over half a century ago.
