Hunting for Dinosaurs The New York Times

Dinosaurs — and the mystery of their extinction millions of years ago — have been an endless source of fascination for centuries. Fossils of these prehistoric beasts have been found all over the world — most recently the gargantuan Dreadnoughtus, aka Titanosaur, was unearthed in the Patagonia region of Argentina. The largest dinosaur ever found, the Titanosaur made its debut in January 2016 at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, where its 122 feet could barely fit in the exhibition space. This TBook, a compilation of articles from The New York Times, features important news and stories about dinosaurs, reported by The Times's top science writers, including John Wilford Noble, James Gorman and Kenneth Chang, as well as a series about fossil hunting called Scientist at Work by the renowned paleontologist Randall Irmis.
