An original, inspiring work of literary non-fiction; an unconventional memoir of woman and land. The Color of the Wild is the beautifully told story of one woman's life, love, family, resolve and determination. More than a memoir, a contemporary western tale with stunning stories interspersed and intertwined with powerful poetry, prose, and striking photographs, Gin's captivating tone and intimate view bring to life the drama and trauma of one year on her family's ranch, scenic and secluded, surrounded by and a part of the wild world around them.

Lyrical and lilting. Powerful and passionate.

Set high in Colorado's San Juan Mountains, along the Headwaters of the Rio Grande, Gin opens her world to the reader with stunning honesty, and compassionate grace, sharing this captivating, personal tale of home, belonging, commitment to land and family. Their life is living testament to the power and clarity of love, life and the natural world.
